

Beat the Stress

31 WAYS TO FEEL HAPPIER
AND MORE RELAXED

Powerful tips for a calmer, saner life.

STRESS & YOUR HEALTH

Stress is sneaky. Especially right now, in the midst of the Coronavirus.

Sometimes you don't even know that you're feeling it until you turn your head and your neck hurts, you sense a knot in your stomach, or you notice your heart beating fast.

The truth is, some stress is normal ... but chronic stress (like what can be happening right now with everything going on) can do a real number on your body.

It can wreak havoc on your hormones, making you gain weight (especially unhealthy belly fat).

And it can also take a major toll on your health, paving the way for illness and disease.

Scientists are learning more all the time about how stress can impact your health.

It's never been a big secret that stress causes illness, but until recently, it was never clear HOW it played a role.

STRESS & INFLAMMATION

But now it seems pretty clear that "chronic psychological stress" can affect your body's ability to regulate its inflammatory response. That's because one of your body's key stress hormones – cortisol – also plays a role in controlling inflammation.

As you likely know, inflammation is associated with practically every disease process affecting our bodies!

That's why I put together this guide!

I wanted to do the best I can to equip you with the tools you need to reduce your stress levels, really enjoy your life and improve your quality of health.

TAKE BACK CONTROL.

Over time, having too many stress hormones in your system is linked with increased inflammation ... and all the problems associated with it.

What can you do about it?

Most of us have never learned how to use the powers within our own bodies to cope with stress.

Many of us learned to “walk it off” or ignore it, hoping it would just magically go away.

“Pushing through” is often the very WORST thing you can do to get through a tough period, since it can keep your stress hormones elevated, even if you end up feeling numb!

If you're not careful, feeling stressed can even become your new "normal," so you don't feel like yourself unless you're feeling the pressure.

Unfortunately, this is the case for way too many of us!

The good news is, you can take back control by learning some easy techniques that will calm your body, ease your mind, and lift your spirit.

This ebook outlines 31 techniques and tips - to help you feel less stressed every day of the month!

I hope it helps you lower your stress levels and find more balance in your life!

Breathe Away Stress

Your breath is an incredibly powerful tool to combat stress. It's so important that it's worth taking several short "breathing breaks" a day.

Why?

Deep breathing helps reset your autonomic nervous system – the system that controls your automatic functions like your heartbeat, blood pressure, swallowing, etc. – into a calmer space.

It only takes 4-5 minutes to feel more relaxed and less stressed!

I've included 3 techniques to help get you started with your breathing practice: one for energy, one for deep breathing, and another for relaxation.

Energetic Breathing

This powerful breath technique was popularized by daredevil adventurer and breathwork guru Wim Hoff. It will simultaneously leave you feeling energized and relaxed. (Note: it also might make you feel a little lightheaded or tingly when you do it – which Hoff says is normal.)

Here's his basic technique:

- Sit comfortably and take 30 quick, deep breaths, like you're blowing up a balloon but in reverse – inhaling through your nose and exhaling through your mouth.
- Next, take a slow, deep breath in and then exhale, holding until you need to breathe in.
- Inhale again, as deep as you can, and hold it for 10 seconds.
- Repeat as many times as you like.

Belly Breathing

Shallow breathing and stress go together like Vancouver and rain. Retraining your body to take deeper breaths will help you feel more relaxed and it can even help strengthen your deep core muscles.

Make time for belly (aka diaphragmatic) breathing sessions every week. You can do this lying down or seated. Note: This one can make you feel sleepy until you get used to it, so if you choose to recline, be prepared to take a nap!

- Sit comfortably in a chair, your knees bent and your shoulders, head and neck relaxed. Place one hand on your belly just below your rib cage, and the other on your upper chest.
- Breathe in slowly through your nose, feeling your stomach move out against your hand. The hand against your chest shouldn't move.
- Next, draw your stomach in as you exhale through your mouth. Again, the hand on your upper chest should remain still.
- Repeat for 3-5 minutes.

Box Breathing

This calming technique is one that everyone seems to find easy to incorporate into their lives. It is used by Navy SEALs, first responders, nurses and teachers. It's called "box" breathing because it's as if you are breathing around the sides of a square. It involves four counts of four, controlling both your in-breath AND your out-breath, as well as holding your breath in between. Do each part of the breath for an equal amount of time (4 counts).

- To start, sit up straight in a chair, feet flat on the floor.
- Next, slowly exhale through your mouth as much air as you possibly can, for a total of 4 counts.
- Now, hold your breath for 4 counts,
- Then, gently and slowly breathe in through your nose for 4 counts.
- And then hold your breath again for 4 counts.
- For a full session of box breathing, you simply repeat the cycle for a total of 4 times through.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR BODY

Go for a walk during lunch

Studies show that being in nature has a calming effect on your mind. Whenever possible, get outside and enjoy some quiet time during the day.

Stay Clear

Avoid "numbing out" with alcohol, drugs, compulsive behaviour (gaming /sex / gambling), or sugar / food. It is more stressful in the long run.

Move

In addition to regular exercise, try relaxing movement like tai chi, walking meditation, and yoga to help combat stress.

Unplug

Make time every day to be away from technology. Turn off your phone, power down your laptop, and go into another room (or outdoors) and enjoy the downtime.

HEAL YOUR BODY

A healthy body is a resilient body, which means you're better able to ward off the negative effects of stress.

- Eating a "clean" and healthy, nutritious, whole foods diet will help you keep blood sugar levels more stable, which is crucial since stress hormones can wreak havoc on them.
- Be sure to get 7 to 8 hours of sleep each night to help your body recover and restore for the coming day.
- Getting regular exercise will boost your "feel-good" hormones and your immune system.
- Quick Tip: Set a timer on your phone at regular intervals to get up and move around, and work off excess energy during the day.

REDISCOVER YOUR FOCUS

Find your why

Having a larger purpose in your life can help put stress in perspective. You might find you have more than one “why” – it could be your family, your health, or some other goal.

CALM YOUR MIND

Over time, stress can become such a habit that it starts to feel normal.

How do you know if stress has become a way of life?

- Listen to the voice in your head and be aware of what it’s telling you. Is it repeating stressful thoughts or phrases throughout the day? That’s one big clue.
- Every once in a while, do a quick body scan: is your jaw clenched? Your shoulders tight? Are you holding your breath?
- You often feel full of dread, sadness, or anger, and wonder why no one else is getting with the (your) program.

If these sound familiar, it’s time to start making some mindset shifts.

Positive self-talk

Turn negative thoughts into positive ones. Example: instead of thinking, “Today is the worst ...

I’m never going to get everything done,” tell yourself, “I can handle this if I take it one step at a time.”

Organize your time

Learn to manage your time more effectively. Try not to overcommit. Break down big problems into smaller parts. Take one step at a time, instead of trying to tackle everything at once.

POSITIVE VIBES ONLY

Create a practice

Set a regular "positivity" practice: read uplifting books, pray, meditate, or watch inspirational videos on a daily basis.

Have fun

Make time for hobbies, interests, and relaxation. You'll come away feeling recharged and ready to tackle nagging problems.

Friends & family

Seek out social support. Spend enough time with those you enjoy, and those who "get it".

Tune out

Stream some chill music or an inspirational podcast to give you a mental "time out" when dealing with busy roads or other stressors.

SOOTHE THE SOUL

Taking care of your spirit means having an attitude of unconditional upholding of your truth and yourself.

- It means honouring what feels real to you - your tribe, your subculture, your authenticity.
- It means that things that make you feel good are worth prioritizing - making art or music, even if it makes you no money, playing, dancing, connecting to nature, even if you do not "accomplish" anything.
- It involves setting clear boundaries – both for yourself and others – and making time for the people you love. Playing with your dog, hugging a loved one, or the simple act of helping someone will all help to reduce your stress levels!
- Keep a positive attitude – but also accept that there are things beyond your control.
- Surround yourself with things that lift you up, and say no to things that you know will create stress.

PSYCHOTROPIC PLANTS

Psychotropic plants have compounds that can bind to our hormones and our neurotransmitters, therefore profoundly impacting our sense of wellbeing.

We use many psychotropics on a daily basis. Some, like coffee and tea, are used so habitually that it seems normal to need their caffeine to get going. But this is not the best choice when dealing with feelings of stress, and can even trigger anxiety.

Using these plants in more intelligent ways can be completely life-altering.

What if you made some swaps to your daily routine?

- Green tea, holy basil or hawthorn tea make a nice alternative to coffee
- Sedatives like passionflower, hops, skullcap or valerian can help you feel calm and relaxed or to help you get deeper, more restorative sleep
- St. John's Wort may help you deal with a dull mood, and CBD use can result in improved mood and pain tolerance without intoxication

Adaptogenic plants are considered psychotropic because they are anti-anxiety, anti-fatigue, antidepressant, neuroprotective, and some are CNS stimulants.

- Eleuthero, ashwagandha or reishi mushrooms might ease a stressful time in your life, such as a move, loss of a job, exams, or a breakup

I call these "power plants", and they can really light up your life.
Enjoy!

Hello friend.

If you are feeling irritable, blah, afraid or powerless, there are strategies that can help you feel better in this guide, but they only work if you give them a try! If you do not free up to it, please reach out and I will try to help.

I hope this finds you well and gives you hope that there is more that you can do for you, your mood and your sanity.

Let's "grow" less stressed together!

Xox Dana

dana@healthywealthyhabits.ca

less stress. more life.

Medical Disclaimer

All information contained in this document is for informational purposes only. It is not intended to diagnose, treat, cure, or prevent health problems. For all serious health issues, please contact a medical or nutrition practitioner. The information provided is based on the best knowledge of the author at the time of writing, and we do not assume liability for the information, be it direct or indirect, consequential, special exemplary, or other damages. In all circumstances, it is always wise to consult your physician before changing your diet, taking supplements, or starting any exercise or health program.